Customer Reviews

As the recordings of Irish poet William Butler Yeats made by Nobel Laureate Seamus Heaney or by the great old man himself become more and more difficult to uncover even here upon this mighty , so deep, so wide, so comprehensive, we do well to hear these songs and odes here, thanks to Naxos, in a fairly representative gathering from the extensive lyrical writings of Mr. Yeats. I prefer of course to here the recordings of a sparse handful of Yeatsian poetry done by Mr. Heaney while a Harvard Professor for the Poetry Room, and often at hand here, now no longer, in Mr. Heaney's humble, authentic voice reading the words he loves. But now we have these professional voices reading for us some songs from Yeats. Jim Norton of course is a well-known voice to followers of Naxos and beyond. We find him often reading Mr. James Joyce as in Dubliners, Pt. 2 and in the abridged Ulysses (Abridged) (Modern Fiction) as well another great Irish author's The Third Policeman (Complete Classics).
