The title says it all: Carrots and Sticks Don't Work. Reward and recognition programs can be costly and inefficient, and they primarily reward employees who are already highly engaged and productive performers. Worse still, these programs actually decrease employee motivation because they can make individual recognition, rather than the overall success of the team, the goal. Yet many businesses turn to these measures first—unaware of a better alternative. So, when it comes to changing your organizational culture, carrots and sticks don't work! What does work is Dr. Paul Marciano's acclaimed RESPECT model, which gives you specific, low-cost, turnkey solutions and action plans-- based on seven key drivers of employee engagement that are proven and supported by decades of research and practice—that will empower you to assess, troubleshoot, and resolve engagement issues in the workplace: Recognition and acknowledgment of employees' contributions Empowerment via tools, resources, and information that set employees up to succeed Supportive feedback through ongoing performance coaching and mentoring Partnering to encourage and foster collaborative working relationships Expectations that set clear, challenging, and attainable performance goals Consideration that lets employees know that they are cared about Trust in your employees' abilities, skills, and judgment

Carrots and Sticks Don't Work delivers the same proven resources and techniques that have enabled trainers, executives, managers, and owners at operations ranging from branches of the United States government to Fortune 500 corporations to twenty-person outfits to realize demonstrable gains in employee productivity and job satisfaction. When you give a little RESPECT you get a more effective organization, with reduced turnover and absenteeism and employees at all levels who are engaged, focused, and committed to succeed as a team. In short, you get maximum ROI from your organization's most powerful resource: its people!

At some level, most managers and employers understand that their business success is dependent on their relationship with their employees. Some even acknowledge this concept with slogans such as, "Our employees are our most important asset." Despite knowing the importance of fully engaged employees, most managers/owners fall short of actually achieving their goal. One of the major reasons is they worked their way up the corporate ladder where the carrot/stick management style is the accepted wisdom. Most have been lead to believe that incentives increase desired behavior and punishment is in order for unacceptable behavior. Paul Marciano has written a very compelling case for much more effective approach. The title gives you the first premise of the book. Carrots and Sticks Don't Work. To prove his point, he gives 20 reasons why they don't work. These reasons are well thought out and backed up by psychological study of human behavior. At times it is fairly easy to talk about what doesn't work. But Marciano does not stop at what does not work. Based on his experience in the field, he has developed a system that works. He calls this the RESPECT Principles. The RESPECT Principles are based on what motivates individual to become fully engaged in their work. The individual components of the RESPECT Model are: Recognition, Empowerment, Supportive Feedback, Partnering, Expectations Consideration and Trust. He devotes a chapter to each of the components of the model. The basic format of each chapter is an introductory discussion, a self-assessment quiz, stories from the trenches and specific tips on how to implement the concepts discussed. The book is exceptionally well written. It is easy to read and understand.
